

For many people around the world, the holiday season is about peace and hope. Although far from being a normal year, this season offers a chance to reflect on the good things this unusual year has offered us and hope for even better times ahead.

This year, 225 refugees are spending their first holiday season in Tennessee. 95 families are experiencing the safety of home in Tennessee for the first time, even in midst of the difficulties of the past year. Although the holiday season this year looks different for many of us, we can offer each other peace, and we can hope together for the good things to come.

Wishing you and yours health and happiness,

The Tennessee Office for Refugees team:
Brad, Frances, Louisa, Nathaniel, Nicole, Samantha, and Tajah
